OFFICE DEPOT SAFE HARBOR STATEMENT

This communication may contain forward-looking statements within the meaning of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 concerning Office Depot, the merger and other transactions contemplated by the merger agreement, Office Depot's long-term credit rating and its revenues and operating earnings. These statements or disclosures may discuss goals, intentions and expectations as to future trends, plans, events, results of operations or financial condition, or state other information relating to Office Depot, based on current beliefs of management as well as assumptions made by, and information currently available to, management. Forward-looking statements generally will be accompanied by words such as "anticipate," "believe," "plan," "could," "estimate," "expect," "forecast," "guidance," "intend," "may,"

“possible,” “potential,” “predict,” “project” or other similar words, phrases or expressions. These forward-looking statements are subject to various risks and uncertainties, many of which are outside of Office Depot’s control. Therefore, investors and shareholders should not place undue reliance on such statements. Factors that could cause actual results to differ materially from those in the forward-looking statements include adverse regulatory decisions; failure to satisfy other closing conditions with respect to the merger; the risks that the new businesses will not be integrated successfully or that Office Depot will not realize estimated cost savings and synergies; Office Depot’s ability to maintain its current long-term credit rating; unanticipated changes in the markets for its business segments; unanticipated downturns in business relationships with customers or their purchases from Office Depot; competitive pressures on Office Depot’s sales and pricing; increases in the cost of material, energy and other production costs, or unexpected costs that cannot be recouped in product pricing; the introduction of competing technologies; unexpected technical or marketing difficulties; unexpected claims, charges, litigation or dispute resolutions; new laws and governmental regulations. The foregoing list of factors is not exhaustive. Investors and shareholders should carefully consider the foregoing factors and the other risks and uncertainties that affect Office Depot’s business described in its Annual Report on Form 10-K, Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q, Current Reports on Form 8-K and other documents filed from time to time with the SEC. Office Depot does not assume any obligation to update these forward-looking statements.

13018 Town Hall Focuses on OfficeMax Merger

NARRATOR VOICEOVER: At a special Town Hall, Office Depot Chairman & CEO, Neil Austrian, explained merging with OfficeMax gives the joint company necessary capital.

NEIL AUSTRIAN: For us to make any big bets, let alone small bets, we’ve really been handicapped here—given the loss of revenue from 16-billion down to 11-billion dollars over the past four or five years. Putting the two businesses together results in a business that has $18 billion in revenue and gives us the financial flexibility to really transform the business.

NARRATOR VOICEOVER: A business facing increased competition from expanding retail and online office suppliers, making this merger a good bet to receive FTC approval.

NEIL AUSTRIAN: And in talking with our anti-trust attorneys, they see the marketplace differently today than it was seen in 1997. So it has changed, at the same time we’ve gotta be prepared that it doesn’t happen.

NARRATOR VOICEOVER: Lessons were learned during the 1997 Staples merger, when Office Depot shared too much with its rival, leading to competitive consequences when the deal fell through.

NEIL AUSTRIAN: Which is why we didn’t name a CEO of the combined company, which is why we didn’t pick a name. Which is why we didn’t pick a location. Because at the end of the day, while I’m very optimistic it’ll be approved, we can’t take the chance that the same thing happens in 2013 that happened in 1997.

NARRATOR VOICEOVER: So for now, it’s business as usual—and Office Depot needs all its associate to continue executing the company strategy.

NEIL AUSTRIAN: And I'd really say keep your head down. Keep doing what you're doing, and you'll be successful. But none of us—whether we had this merger or didn't have this merger—is guaranteed anything. And I don't wanna get up here and say everybody's gonna have a job for life, cause that's not the case. But there are no major layoffs planned.

NARRATOR VOICEOVER: In fact, there's an increased focus on building a stronger company, that can better compete in a constantly changing world.

NEIL AUSTRIAN: I mean, we've proven we can run a business in really crummy times. And they've been pretty bad. So I think in terms of putting these two businesses together, there has to be a new vision in terms of what can be. And I think that we've got one shot, and a real opportunity to take advantage of that.
